Marion, Ireland

Well, in Ireland we always have a lot of rain. It rains most of the year so I'm quite used to rain, but it's a soft rain, so I quite like the soft rain. I don't like really, really hard rain that stops you from doing things. On a rainy day, I usually stay inside and if I'm in Ireland, I'll sit by the fire and read a really good book.

Number 2: (zweimal lesen)

Kate, New Zealand

On a rainy day, I just love to wake up late, at about 11 or 12 o'clock, because I feel better and more relaxed, and then I might watch some TV, watch a movie with my friends at home, cook some popcorn, and generally for the whole day, we just relax at home.

Number 3: (zweimal lesen)

Kim, Korea

I don't like rain and that's because rainy days make me very sad and depressed so most of the rainy days I stay at home, I try not to go outside and at home I just get a cup of coffee, turn on the air-conditioner, turn on the Internet and chat with friends who are online.

Number 4: (zweimal lesen)

Jeannie, America

Ah, the rain! I like rain. I like the sound of it. I like being alone in my room and just looking at the rain. But I also like to walk around in the rain, with or without umbrella, depending on my mood. I just feel really good about rainy days.

Number 5: (zweimal lesen)

Barbara, Australia

How do I feel about the rain? Actually, I don't mind rainy days at all. It's fine for me to go out in the rain. You can go for a walk in the rain. It can be quite romantic when you're with someone you love. That's a good thing. Actually, I prefer cooler weather to warm weather and if the rain is part of that, that's no problem for me.

Hector the raven

Tourists who visit the Tower of London often see a number of large black birds. They are ravens. They have been there for a very long time. Stories even say that when they leave, it will be the end of the Tower and the end of Britain. But this will never happen, because the ravens in the Tower cannot fly.

The Tower has got a long history. It was once a place where people were killed, and it was said that the souls of those who died in the Tower went into the ravens. This is perhaps really true. Not long ago there was a raven in the Tower that must have got the soul of a terrible person. The name of the raven was Hector, and he was not a nice bird.

When he was at the Tower, Hector hated tourists. And he most hated American tourists. He often attacked them and took sweets from their children. Hector could talk like a parrot, and as soon as he saw a group of tourists, he shouted "Hallo" and ran towards them. Then the tourists often ran away.

But Hector is no longer in the Tower. He was dangerous, so he was taken to London Zoo. But there the problems didn't stop. He started to attack all the other birds. His keeper once said, "Hector is the only bird whose cage is too dangerous for us. When we want to clean his cage, we must push him to the back of the cage before we can start."

But Hector can be funny, too. He hides a coin in his cage and waits till somebody comes. Then he says, "Come here, come over here." When the visitor then goes to his cage, Hector fetches his coin and gives it to the visitor. The people think this is wonderful and give the coin back to Hector. As soon as they put their hands into his cage, he bites them. He thinks this is really funny. He runs round his cage and laughs loudly.
